

BRISTOL HIGH TO MEET MORRISVILLE IN GRID BATTLE

Annual Turkey Day Clash To Take Place Tomorrow Morning

AT MORRISVILLE

Both Teams Have Blood In Their Eyes For This Fray

By Jack W. Gill

Bristol and Morrisville, streaming down the football gridiron in a searing stretch drive, are both looking up for tomorrow's big Thanksgiving Day game with fire in their respective eyes.

The player who sinks his toe into the ball for the opening kick-off at Morrisville will be touching the torch to a keg of explosive dynamite. For promptly at 10 o'clock two of the highest scoring grid elevens in suburban ranks will lock horns in a desperate championship entanglement.

The traditional Bristol-Morrisville game has returned to its former prominence in district play. Up until a few years ago, this was annually the game to decide the Lower Bucks supremacy. But the Bunnies suffered a lapse in calibre and in the interim Morrisville made happy hay while the sun shone brightly. However, Thursday's important fust has the district as well as the Bi-County Big Four Conference titles riding on the outcome.

There may have better Bristol-Morrisville teams to play in this hotly contested string of successive scraps, but there never were more two evenly matched aggregations thrown at one another on the field. All throughout this surprising season both clubs have played "follow the leader."

Bristol, rising from the depths of a dismal 1940 season that found the Bunnies annexing but one game, has not lost a 1941 contest since the opening game against Trenton Catholic in early October. In viewing seasonal charts, this is the only edge that Morrisville takes, for while Bristol lost to Catholic by a 13-6 margin, the Bulldogs upset the Trenton lads, 14-0.

Led by a new mentor, Coach Clarence Bartholomew, of Penn and Merchantsville, Bristol has a brilliant offensive team with a penchant for scoring in doses. They possess an eight game mark of 153 points. Morrisville, a well balanced club, has tallied 131 markers in a nine game stretch.

As both outfits enter the game as an even choice to triumph, fans are looking toward Army Capriotti to keep moving for Bristol's sake. The brilliant local back, who went on a 25 point rampage against Bridgeport last week, will hardly hit such a dazzling peak against the tight Morrisville defense, primed to meet his every crack. But his presence buoy the hopes of Bunny backers. Captain Chick Di Angelo, who has been a quiet mainstay of the startling Bristol squad this year, Keith Rosser, whose blocking has assisted fellow backs and Lou Galzerano, speedy climax runner who saved the Cardinals' face in the Burlington scrap, will form the starting Bristol backfield. On paper thus far it has been a hard running, versatile unit capable of doing nearly anything it has set its mind upon accomplishing.

Morrisville is led by perhaps the hardest line plunger in the game. But McAllister doesn't stop with ball carrying. Watch his defensive antics back.

Locate Missing Socialite

Philadelphia, Nov. 26—An eight-State search for pretty Isabelle H. Perrin, 27-year-old Philadelphia socialite, ended today when her stepfather, Edward O. Troth, announced that she has been located in New York City.

"Mrs. Troth and I heard from Isabelle early this morning," Troth said at his home, "Chez Nous," in the Germantown section. "She said she was staying with friends in New York and was getting in touch with her father. Her mother probably will go to New York to see her today."

Propose Anti-Strike Legislation

Washington, Nov. 26—Three Congressional groups today competed for sponsorship of anti-strike legislation to be thrust before Congress next week as spokesmen for organized labor denounced all restrictive measures.

With the course of legislation clouded by wide division of opinion, Price Administrator Leon Henderson advised a group of Congressmen that an "administration labor policy" is being framed.

The House Labor Committee is scheduled to consider tomorrow a substitute program being devised by Rep. Ramspeck, D. Ga., which puts teeth in mediation machinery and orders virtually compulsory arbitration.

Germans Checked South of Moscow

Kulbyshev, Nov. 26—German forces have been checked south of Moscow but are still advancing on the front on the northern sectors of the defense area of the capital, according to latest dispatches.

The newspaper Pravda said that south of the city the German offensive against the main Moscow-Tula highway has been halted and that the Nazis there have suffered great losses.

But in the direction of Klin on the city's northwestern defense sector, Pravda said, the Germans are still advancing northeast and have captured several more villages. Pravda said, however, that a Soviet attack recaptured five of these towns.

All enemy attacks due west of Moscow were declared to have been beaten off.

Instituted As Rector of Bedminster Parish

The Rev. David Oscar Trauger, of Bedminster, who has for the past three years been supplying the Church of the Good Shepherd, at Kensington, as lay reader, deacon and priest, was instituted as rector of the parish on Monday evening, when the Rt. Rev. Francis M. Tait, Bishop of the Diocese of Pennsylvania (Episcopal) made his annual visitation.

The Rev. Trauger, who graduated from Doylestown high school, class of 1927, Ursinus College, and received his master's degree at Rutgers University, New Brunswick, N. J., has been teaching at the Yeaton high school.

While a member of the faculty of the Yeaton high school, he attended the Divinity School of the Protestant Episcopal Church in Philadelphia and also served the parish in Kensington, increasing the membership to more than twice its size.

The young clergyman, before accepting a position in the Yeaton high school teaching mathematics, taught in a preparatory school at Bellows Falls, Vermont.

Some time ago the young priest had the opportunity of taking a parish which offered him considerably more salary, but he refused on the grounds that the parish he is now associated with has practically been revived and has progressed until it is becoming an influential factor in that section of the city.

Rev. Trauger will continue his teaching career until he can be supported as a full-time rector.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

Contradictions

Washington, Nov. 25.

ONE of the most distressing things in our country is the ability of public men to face both ways with impunity: to say one thing and do another; to make promises and then repudiate them. So successfully is this done in this days that the stage has been reached where a man's word no longer means very much. Whether he keeps it or not appears to make little difference.

THAT is a pretty serious charge to lay against the public life of the day, but the evidence to sustain it is abundant and convincing. There are, in fact, so many instances that the novelty has worn off. It is no longer sensational when the words of our higher public officials are contradicted by their deeds. Incidentally, it is a reflection upon the American people that when these contradictions and repudiations are disclosed so little resentment is evinced.

—O—

TAKE, for example, the irreconcilable nature of what is going on today in House and Senate. The contrast could not be greater. On the Senate side, the Byrd committee has begun hearings looking to the drastic curtailment of all non-defense expenditures. The President last January solemnly warned that every non-essential activity must be "pared to the bone." Governor Eccles of the Reserve Board has insisted that only the deepest cut can avert catastrophe. Secretary Morgenthau has urged a billion-dollar reduction. Senator Byrd believes that two billions can be eliminated. The Budget Director, in accordance with the Byrd resolution, has submitted three estimates—for a billion, a billion-and-a-half and two-billion curtailment.

Opportunities of Small Business Man Considered

C. Burnley White reminded members of Bensalem Rotary Club last evening of the opportunities that a small business man has in America.

The speaker stated that in his experience, he has seen small business men with groups of employees of many different nationalities and many creeds, all working peacefully together.

"The small business man usually has the confidence of the community, and is oftentimes called upon to help solve difficult problems," he also said. The Rev. Arthur E. Gibson, who presided at the meeting at Red Lion Inn, welcomed five guests from Bristol club and one from Morrisville club. There was but one absentee from the Bensalem organization.

Tables were decorated for Thanksgiving, with gingerbread turkeys adding to the attractiveness.

WHY AMERICANS GIVE THANKS

When the Pilgrim Fathers observed the first Thanksgiving Day, they had indeed few of those bounties for which in modern times official proclamations remind Americans to give thanks. Their gratitude was expressed not for things but for conditions.

They reviewed their past, contrasted it with what they had attained and heartily gave thanks that they had achieved freedom of worship and liberty of opinion. Those blessings have been preserved to this day. Who shall say America has little to be thankful for?

In that first Thanksgiving, prayers of gratitude no doubt were offered for expectations of the future. These devout ones stood on the seacoast of a vast region. Little did they know of its possibilities, but in the confidence of their faith they gave thanks for opportunities. Divine Providence fulfilled their expectations even in their lifetime, and through the centuries permitted continued development until there emerged this continent-wide nation, replete with resources the extent of which can hardly be imagined. Shall anyone in cowardly despair today exclaim: "What has America to be thankful for?"

In their wisdom and foresight, these Pilgrim Fathers had planned orderly organization of their society so that the will of the majority should prevail. They had made simple, but adequate, provision for the needs of their community to insure justice and peace and individual rights. For this, they had reason to express their thanks.

More than three hundred years have passed. A mighty nation has developed from those simple beginnings, but the United States of America stands as a staunch defender and exponent of democracy. It is fitting that Americans should feel something of the gratitude expressed by the Pilgrim Fathers that first Thanksgiving Day.

Gratitude is a worthy emotion. The conditions that prompt and deepen it at this Thanksgiving season should also bring a sense of great responsibility.

RISING NEWSPAPER COSTS

Hit by the rising costs of newspaper production, three leading Vermont newspapers have announced an increase in their circulation rates. The papers are the Burlington Daily News, an afternoon paper, and the Burlington Free Press and the Rutland Herald, morning papers. The price was raised from three to four cents a copy.

This action indicates that the smaller newspapers will soon be following in the footsteps of the larger dailies, many of which now charge five cents per copy. In the South and the West, where costs are higher and advertising perhaps less abundant, most daily newspapers have always been five cents per copy and their problem is to hold to that price. In the East, before the World War, most newspapers sold for one cent. Today three cents is the average with many newspapers selling for more.

Publishers, apart from wage increases, have been forced to pay an increase of 43 per cent in newsprint in the last four years, and all other items entering into the printing of a newspaper have advanced from rates prevailing for the last decade, excepting only various syndicated features.

NICE FALL DAYS YET REMAIN FOR WASHING OF SOILED PILLOWS

By Miss Edna Stephany

(Home Economics Representative)

Some like them large, some like them small, but the best pillow for the bed is one that permits you to lie practically flat.

A good pillow is plump, soft, lightweight, resilient, and free from odor. The best materials of which to make one are goose feathers and ticking firm enough to keep the feathers inside.

To keep a pillow in good condition, fluff it up thoroughly each day and place it where light and air reach it. Never put the pillow in the hot sun, shine.

If fall days caught you with soiled pillows, do not despair. There is yet time to wash them. But try to pick a clear breezy day.

There are two ways to wash pillows. One is to wash the feathers and the case separately. The other is to wash the feathers without removing them from the case, but better results come from the former method although it increases the work. The ticking often needs rubbing which will break the feathers. A good way to do this is to bag the openings of the ticking and bag together and shake the feathers from one to the other. When the feathers are dry they can be put back into the clean ticking in the same way. Transfer the feathers to a lightweight bag if feathers are to be washed separately.

The pillow may be washed by hand or in a washing machine. Soak first in lukewarm water. If the pillow is very soiled, add a weak washing soda solution to the tub of water in which it is soaked.

Use warm soapy water for washing. Squeeze the pillow to force the water through the weathers. Repeat with a second sud. Thorough rinsing in several waters is necessary to remove all soap. Squeeze and pin to a clothesline.

AND, while the Senate committee is thus engaged, what is the House doing? The House is getting ready to pass the Rivers and Harbors bill, authorizing projects to the amount of $1,000,000,000. This measure is denounced by Senator Clark of Missouri, as "the most indefensible bill ever heard of." Senator Vandenberg, of Michigan, declares that "it represents the most scandalous distribution of pork in all the history of log-rolling and back-scratching legislation. It is a stretch in the nostrils of hard-pressed taxpayers." "There is enough pork in this bill," says Senator Tydings, of Maryland, "not only to load all the ships we are now building but all those we will build for a long time to come."

YET we find the same Administration forces supposedly co-operating with the Byrd committee in the Senate to cut down a billion dollars strongly supporting in the House this bill, which would add on a billion dollars. In the bill is an authorization of $285,000,000 for the proposed St. Lawrence seaway—a plan which twice has been rejected by the Senate but which Mr. Roosevelt has revived. He calls it a national-defense measure, but this aspect is so debatable and the whole scheme so dubious that long ago it became clear that it could not go through either House or Senate on its merits. Accordingly, the expedient was devised of putting it in the omnibus river and harbors bill.

THIS was regarded as a very slick trick indeed. The first and natural effect of the scheme was to put on the committee tremendous pressure from all quarters. Every member with a pet improvement naturally brought it out. If it was argued, the President could put his pet project in this bill, there was no reason others could not do so, too. Also, it was argued that this is the bill of all others to hook in on, as, if the Presidents pet is included, there is no danger of his vetoing the bill, no matter how over-loaded. He hardly, it was argued, could penalize others for doing what he has done himself.

THE result is that in the bill, besides the $285,000,000 for the St. Lawrence seaway, there are $197,000,000 for the discredited Florida ship canal and $75,000,000 for the old Tombigbee river project, which has been battling around Congress for years. These are the larger items—the three of them totaling $557,000,000—but there are an infinite number of smaller ones. For example, there are thirteen separate projects in the little State of Maryland. The State (Texas) of the chairman of the committee reporting the bill gets a dozen of considerable size, including inter-coastal waterways, ship canals and storage reservoirs. The "pork" has been distributed in fairly equal proportions between North and South. The calculation is that there are almost enough members with a personal stake in the bill to put it through intact.

PERHAPS this is so. Nevertheless, in both House and Senate there will be a determined effort to cut out the three big items—St. Lawrence seaway, Florida canal, Tombigbee river. Particularly will the fight be strong in the Senate. The passage of this bill in its present shape would make a joke of the Byrd committee. It goes through intact, the work of the Byrd committee will be nullified before it is well started. The Byrd committee is the one instrumentality through which control of the Federal finances can be regained. If it fails, the last chance of recovering financial stability will be gone.

NEITHER our defense at home nor our policy abroad can be effectively implemented if our Federal financial structure is tottering and national insolvency threatens. Under the circumstances, it would seem that the thirty million taxpayers who next year will shell out to the Treasury so much more of their income than they ever did before might well take notice of this situation. It is obviously to their interest to oppose such a bill. It is equally to their interest to get behind the Byrd committee. The difficulty is to stir them into action. It seems incredible that they will cheerfully pay the kind of taxes they are going to have to pay and still continue to tolerate such indigestible waste of their money.

Emerald Embassy by FRANCIS GERARD

CHAPTER TWENTY

At the window of a flat high above Park Lane, His Highness Prince Satsui, Major of the 63rd Regiment, Imperial Japanese Army, stared across the green stretches of Hyde Park. There was about him, at this moment, none of the air of the polished cosmopolitan. He was dressed now in a simple black kimono with a wide scarlet sash. His bare feet were thrust into little heeled slippers of the same brilliant colour as his sash. His long, strong, aristocratic hands were held at waist level, their fingers interlaced. His face was impassive, his eyes alone betraying the fact that they mirrored not the green stretches of the park but his own troubled thoughts.

Finally Satsui seated himself cross-legged on the great, square sitting-cushion before which a little table, no more than a foot high, had been placed with its lacquer tray and the lovely little purple jade bowls from which he would drink his tea. This tea drinking was a habit Major Satsui had formed when fighting with his regiment during the annexation of Manchukuo. Though he did drink the wines, spirits and cocktails of western civilization, he cared little for them, infinitely preferring endless little bowls of Chinese tea.

Having poured his tea into one of the minute bowls, the Prince left it down, untasted, as he rose to cross the room to kneel before a charming little statue of Buddha, which rested inescapably and benign in a niche in the wall.

Satsui was sprung from one of the oldest families of Japan, of the Samurai, the ancient fighting aristocracy of Nippon. He could trace his descent in the direct line for eighteen hundred years.

Satsui returned to his cushion and sipped his tea. As he did so, he allowed his mind to wander back over the last two years. He remembered how carefully he had studied Anne de Vassignac from afar before ever he obtained an introduction to her. His approach had been subtle in the extreme. With clever questioning which displayed nothing of his acute interest, he had obtained from her friends and acquaintances information about her, her likes and dislikes, her innumerable whims and fancies, her virtues and her greater impetuous generosity. With coldly efficient logic, he had tabulated all the information obtained until such time as he considered that he knew Anne de Vassignac as well as anyone would ever know her. Then he arranged to meet her.

His relations with her had been planned and scheduled as carefully as ever was a military campaign. The first objective in his deliberate plan of attack had been reached when he became her lover, but this was not an end in itself; it was merely a stepping-stone to ultimate dominance of the girl. In this conquest of Anne de Vassignac, Satsui's personal feelings were very little involved. He was a nobleman of the island empire which he loved with deepest veneration.

The Countess had but one interest for this Japanese prince. She could—with care and cunning—be made Dwan of Sulunga, that island which had assumed such vast strategic importance now that England and Japan had become estranged. Satsui set down the bowl from which he had been drinking and stared across the room, a slight frown drawing down his fascinating eyebrows. He knew now that the thing which he had accounted accomplished was by no means so. What was that English saying—something about not counting one's chickens before they were hatched? He had counted his chicken—his one prize chicken—and now he found that he was not at all sure of it.

Anne de Vassignac, study her for one might, was ever an incalculable force, for she was a creature of whims and moods and enthusiasms. The intrusion of this man Meredith was a misfortune; more, it was a catastrophe from Satsui's point of view, for he knew the Countess well enough to recognize the symptoms when he saw them. He felt that—for the first time in her wilful, selfish life—she was genuinely infatuated.

It had been a mistake on his part to attempt what he now saw to be a childish attack on the man. That unfortunate reverse he had suffered at Meredith's hands was doubly so in that he, himself, had occasioned it. In the ordinary way, nothing would have persuaded him to demean himself by indulging in a rough-and-tumble with the man Meredith, but he knew so well what importance Anne attached to the physical excellence of a man. His confidence in his own skill in judo had proved his undoing; he had never yet met a man of Meredith's bulk who could move with such astonishing speed.

Satsui poured himself another cup of the green tea and stared morosely across the room, his gaze unwinking as that of the Buddha who seemed to be scrutinizing him.

This business of those crack-brained verses which Anne had induced her wretched little husband to write was the most appalling danger. Satsui realized quite well what had prompted Anne to this madness, her never-ending search for novelty and sensation. True, that vital clue was most cunningly concealed. He granted that much to Raoul de Vassignac's low cunning but the danger remained and was acute.

Anne would derive a tremendous thrill from the fact that she had placed in Meredith's hands something which might well lead to their undoing. Excitement was what she craved, and for that thrill she was willing to risk the very throne of Sulunga.

Satsui knew that, were he ever able to seat her on the throne, she would tire of her fate within a few years. By that time it would not matter for Sulunga would be firmly held in the grip of Japan.

Of course, necklace or no necklace, it might be possible to accomplish the overthrow of the present Dwan and his replacement by his cousin, but the emerald necklace would afford a pretext for the new type of power politics which Herr Hitler had introduced and demonstrated.

Let Anne be the wearer of the necklace and the Sulungese themselves would accept her as their Dwan. In a world which rang with "self-determination," none of the western democracies would dare to intervene if the people of Sulunga themselves declared that they were in favour of the new Dwan. Thus the risking of the necklace in this gambler's spirit was something which profoundly shocked Satsui.

He must take care that there would be no more of those cryptic communications to Sir John Mer-dith. With regard to Count Raoul, he had put the fear of death into him for his share in this absurd gesture, but Anne was another matter. It was fortunate indeed that he, Prince Satsui, had been there to answer the telephone that afternoon when Meredith had rung up to ask for an interview with Anne. Fortunately, also, that the girl's bath had been running at the time and she had not heard the telephone ringing. He had been able to put Meredith off, but he would have to tell Tot to watch any letters addressed to the Countess and to bring him those of which he was not quite certain. Meredith must not be allowed to get in touch again with Anne de Vassignac. The man was a danger.

Of course, it would be impossible to keep them apart were Meredith determined on a meeting, and so it would be better if he were removed. Satsui felt no personal animosity towards the man. He had recovered his control soon after Meredith had man-handled him, but still it was of vital importance that Sir John should cease to play any part in the Sulunga affair. There was only one way of guaranteeing this and that way would have to be taken.

The Prince would do it himself, or Hama would, but the risk was too great. He could not afford to be linked with Meredith's proposed death. . . . Quite deliberately he sat and pondered the best way in which to murder Meredith without involving himself. Within five minutes he had made up his mind what to do, then, striking a small gong, waited for Hama to come into the room.

"A tweed suit, Hama," ordered his master. "And the car in twenty minutes."

Within three hours, Prince Satsui slid out from behind the wheel of his sport model in the municipal park in Ipswich. He entered a public telephone box and asked for Weyland 23. While the exchange was getting the number, he placed a triple-folded handkerchief over the mouthpiece so that his voice would be less distinct.

"Weyland Cottage Hospital," a feminine voice informed him.

"May I speak to Mr. Henry Huff, please?" asked Satsui.

"Who?"

"Mr. Henry Huff," repeated the Japanese. "He is the mortuary assistant."

After a while a whining Cockney voice spoke. "Hello, 'uff speakin'." Who wants me?"

"Can anybody overhear our conversation?"

"No," came Huff's cautious reply. "Who is it?"

"Green blood," said Satsui, promptly giving what was an agreed signal.

"Wot did yer s'y?" came a hoarse query.

"Green blood," repeated the prince. "What time do you get off this evening?"

"'Alf pas' five."

"How long would it take you to get to Ipswich?"

"I could be there by a quarter past six."

"Good!" said Satsui. "Now listen: Get into Ipswich by that time and take a bus that goes along the Colchester Road. Get off opposite the gates to a place called Chaney Park. There will be a big yellow coupé drawn up on the left of the road. Get into it. I will be there waiting for you."

RECIPES

These Thanksgiving Recipes
Reach A New Culinary High

There is something about Thanksgiving Day that seems to call forth our very best efforts as cooks. That's the day when, above all others, we try to serve a meal worthy of a long line of memorable predecessors, yet with some new note that marks it of today. So here are recipes, true and tried, and others that are new and different. Combine them and you'll have a menu that is truly distinctive.

Roast Turkey

After the poultry is dressed and cleaned, it is ready to stuff. Wipe the fowl, rub the inside with salt, place the stuffing in the cavity where the crop was removed and inside the body. Too much stuffing should not be used, as it swells in cooking, particularly if made of crackers, and also tends to absorb the juices. After the fowl is stuffed, sew up the opening. Place in a hot oven until the fowl begins to brown; then cover and cook at low heat till tender. Baste from drippings in the pan, and allow 20 to 30 minutes to each pound for roasting.

Chestnut Dressing

- 1/2 pound salted crackers
- 3/4 pound chestnuts
- 1 tablespoon melted butter
- 2 eggs
- Milk, about 1 quart
- Sage
- Pepper, salt and a little curry powder

Peel chestnuts and put through meat grinder with the crackers. Mix in seasoning, add milk enough to make quite moist and then add the eggs.

Cranberry Relish

Wash and drain 1 quart cranberries, add pulp of 1 orange and a little rind. Grind in food chopper. Then add 1 1/2 cups sugar. Requires no cooking.

Sweet Potato Puff

Mash sweet potatoes with plenty of butter. Put in baking dish with layers of marshmallow whip, and bake until brown.

Sweet Potato Pudding

- 6 sweet potatoes
- 3/4 pound butter
- 1 1/2 pints milk
- 1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
- 1 grated lemon rind
- 4 egg yolks
- 3/4 pound sugar
- 1/2 teaspoon nutmeg
- 1/2 teaspoon allspice

Boil and mash sweet potatoes, add other ingredients, beat thoroughly. Bake in buttered casserole, covered for 45 minutes, uncovered for 15 minutes.

Corn Fritters

- 1 can corn
- 1 cup flour
- 1 teaspoon baking powder
- 2 teaspoons salt
- 1/4 teaspoon pepper
- 2 eggs

Finely chop corn, adding flour into which baking powder has been sifted, add salt and pepper and well beaten egg yolks. Then fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Drop mixture by tablespoonfuls into hot fat. When brown and thoroughly cooked drain on waxed paper and serve.

Baked Onions

Parboil the onions, place in a buttered baking dish, salt and pepper to taste, cover with white sauce and bake about 40 minutes or until the white sauce is brown on the top.

Turnip Cup with Pea Filling

Wash, pare and cut a slice from turnips so that they will stand on end. Hollow out the insides forming a cup. Have peas ready, heated and seasoned with white sauce. Fill the cup with the mixture and sprinkle top with chopped parsley. Garnish with parsley and serve.

Fruit and Nut Salad

- 1 large pineapple
 - 1/4 pound shelled almonds
 - 1/4 pound shelled filberts
 - 1 dozen maraschino cherries
 - 1 cup whipped cream
 - 1 cup mayonnaise
- Cut pineapple in small pieces. Blanch nuts. Mix all and serve on lettuce leaves.

Gold Coast Salad Bowl

- 2 grapefruit
- 2 oranges
- French dressing
- Romaine
- Endive
- 1/2 Avocado
- Mayonnaise

Peel grapefruit and oranges, removing sections whole. Marinate in French dressing. Chill. Line small salad bowl with alternate spears of romaine and endive. Pare and half avocado. Remove stone. Cut one half in serving-size pieces. Fit pieces together and place in center of salad bowl; fill cavity of avocado with mayonnaise. Arrange orange and grapefruit sections around center. Serve with extra dressing if desired.

Cranberry Meringue Pie

- 1 1/2 cups sugar
- 2 cups cranberries
- 2 eggs
- 1/2 teaspoon vanilla
- 1/2 cup cold water
- 1 tablespoon flour
- 1 tablespoon butter

2 tablespoons powdered sugar
Cook sugar and water to syrup; add cranberries; cook until popped. Cool a little. Mix smoothly in a bowl the flour and yolks of eggs. Add 3 tablespoons of cooked cranberries; then add to the rest of the berries and simmer for three minutes. Remove from fire, stir in butter and vanilla, set aside to cool. Turn filling into deep crust previously baked. Cover with meringue of stiffly beaten whites of eggs and the powdered sugar. Place in oven and brown.

Thanksgiving Pumpkin Pie

- 2 eggs
 - 1 1/2 cups strained pumpkin
 - 3/4 cup sugar
 - 1 level teaspoon cinnamon
 - 1/2 teaspoon salt
 - 1 1/2 cups milk
 - 1 level teaspoon ginger
 - Little molasses
- Mix the sugar, ginger cinnamon and salt together until there are no lumps, then add to the pumpkin and mix thoroughly. Beat the eggs until light and add to this mixture, then add little molasses. Lastly add the milk. Mix together well and put into pie pan. Bake in moderate oven about an hour.

- 1 cup walnut meats, cut up
- 1 cup dates, cut up

not only in Bucks county, but in Montgomery, Berks, Center and Dauphin counties. He is of the opinion that although the rainfall over the week-end was light, it was of great benefit to the grains and grasses. The Winter grain, he said, does not look good in any of these counties.

Mr. Greenwalt stated also that there has been a shortage of water, and in some places farmers were compelled to haul water from springs and creeks. In a number of places the wells have been exhausted of their water supply.

Truckers in the lower part of the county have about completed the planting of the spinach, but this also has been suffering from the drought. The celery crop, the harvest of which has been completed, also is rather short. Truckers who irrigated their fields were more fortunate, however.

Bright ~~WHITE~~ CHRISTMAS COMING

Sorry the "white" part has to be crossed out. It's too early to tell. But early or not, steps are being taken right now to make sure of a "bright Christmas."

Philadelphia Electric's crack crews are riding the lines, testing primary circuits, measuring the capacity of transformers, checking every detail of power supply throughout Philadelphia and the four surrounding counties.

Night after night the year round—in fair weather or raging storm—checks like these are made when the peak load is on, to be certain that the installed capacity is in condition to take care of the requirements.

Your neighbors in Philadelphia Electric, who care for your electrical needs, start months in advance and do all things possible so there won't be a dull moment during the holidays.

DO YOU KNOW—that a kilowatt-hour of electricity, which in 1901 required 6 1/4 pounds of coal to produce, now can be obtained from less than a pound? New principles in turbine design and in operating technique have brought new efficiency to generating stations. This is just one of many ways in which P.E. has always pioneered, to assure you of better electrical service at lower rates.

Newtown and Langhorne, two storied small school football rivals of hard-fighting qualities, come to grips at Newtown this Thanksgiving Day for the 15th time since the two first met in 1928.

Not outdone by any Turkey Day scrap, this is one of the hardest fights of the season each year. Many a punch has been swapped in this game and many an upset has been recorded. Both teams play a one-game season, but this year's scrap is an all important one for Newtown.

The best team in Newtown history, aiming at a Little Four conference sweep, needs only to trounce Langhorne to cop the championship. The big Blue has already levelled Bensalem, 20-18, and Fallsington, 12-0.

Langhorne players, confident of pulling through to at least one win this year to extract a bit of sweetness out of a miserable season, are at an enthusiastic inspirational pitch. Should they succeed in defeating Newtown, a tie between the Indians and Bensalem will exist for the Little Four title.

Heavily favored, however, is Newtown. The proteges of Coach Walt Eaton have a well-balanced and heavy aggregation, led by Captain Clarence Pidcock and Larry Fischer. Pidcock, one of the best backs in district play, is an adept end sweeper, an accurate passer and a good punter. Fischer is a rough and ready guard on the defense and a neat package at pulling out of the line to form running interference. Bob Datter is another mainstay in the Blue backfield.

Langhorne, led by little Lou Spattacino, a slippery broken field runner, lacks necessary blocking and power. The Red and Blue has been able to score but three touchdowns all year. The line has been improved greatly since the start of the season and is currently led by big Edgcar Scepy, Captain LeRoy Slater and Bill Knapp. Notman Knox will call the Langhorne signals and punt.

total funds with $120,000 to be distributed to 2800 members. Last year, and for a number of years before that the Merchants' National Bank of Quakertown ranked No. 1, but this year the upper-end institution slips to second position with a total of $114,000 although it is a very nice increase over last year. The Bristol Trust Company showed the largest increase in the entire county, with $29,128 over last season.

Bristol's two banks lead the county with $219,248 to be mailed out this week. Quakertown comes second with a total of $179,000 in three banks.

Doylestown's two banks will mail out $128,000, including $73,000 to 1200 members to be sent out by the Doylestown Trust Company, the largest in the history of the institution; and $55,000 by the Doylestown National Bank to 1080 club members.

Next in line in the county is Newtown with $73,000 to be distributed by two banks and then Perkasie, with $65,750 in two banks.

The Solebury National Bank of New Hope, which last year distributed $10,500, this year sent out $12,000 to 318 members, a very fine increase considering the size of the club. Solebury is on even terms with Dublin National, with another $12,000.

Bristol Borough's increase over last year is $52,435.

The Lansdale National Bank with 2565 members will distribute a total of $130,394 this week, the largest amount in about 10 years. Last year the Lansdale bank mailed out $111,250. Union National of Souderton will send out $72,000 this week.

The Peoples' National Bank of Souderton, with a big increase to $46,350, brings that borough's total to $118,350 in two banks.

About one-half of the $41,000 to be distributed by the Telford National Bank, pioneers of the club movement in Bucks county, will go to Bucks county club members.

The second highest year in the history of Christmas Club funds in Bucks county was paid out in 1929 when 23 banks sent out checks amounting to $847,150.

We thank Thee that they gave unto us the example of National Thanksgiving. Make us worthy of our heritage, O God.
